

A large body of water, likely a lake or pond, with several ducks and one swan swimming. The water is dark blue with ripples. In the background, there are trees and utility poles under a bright blue sky with scattered white clouds. The text is overlaid on the image in a light blue, serif font.

The Winter Sun

By Steven Nyman

The sun is my faithful year-round companion. It provides warmth in spite of the season.

The sun energizes me and makes me feel good. It melts the ice inside my soul.

The sun keeps the dark away.

It inspires me. It makes me happy and excited.

The sun makes the sky and water blue. It lets the green grass and tall trees grow.

The sun makes our day colorful.

The sun dries the puddles
I come across.

The sun allows us to see the beauties of nature.

It lets us see the birds swimming and the flowers blooming. It lets us see the white snow and the green grass.

The sun allows us to see.
Not only our planet, but ourselves, both inside and out.

January 18, 2015